Millions of People With Mental Health Issues Could be Affected by Medicaid Cuts

The House's proposed budget cuts to Medicaid threaten essential mental health services for millions of Americans who rely on the program. Medicaid is the largest provider of mental health care, covering critical treatments like therapy, medications, and crisis intervention. Reductions in funding could limit access to care, especially for vulnerable groups such as children, low-income families, and those with serious mental health conditions. Advocates warn that these cuts could worsen health outcomes and disrupt care, making it harder for people to manage their conditions. This budget decision will impact millions who depend on Medicaid for mental health care.

Cardinal Health grant takes aim at 'huge need' to improve mental health in Ohio workplaces

Cardinal Health is donating $1 million to Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center to support mental health initiatives in the workforce. The funds will assist OSU's Center for Psychiatry and Resilience in developing practical strategies to improve employee mental health, addressing the significant need in central Ohio. Mental health challenges not only affect individuals but also their coworkers and communities. Experts emphasize the importance of workplaces in supporting employees' mental health, as mental illness leads to lost productivity and higher costs. Employers are encouraged to invest in mental health programs to enhance workplace culture and overall business performance.
